Hailing from Karelia, Anton Filatov is a media artist and musician with more than 10 years of trajectory. He produced several music releases and live shows under three different monikers: Og, Anton Filatov and Wind in Willows. His music and artworks have been presented in venues from Baku to Berlin, with a distinctive connection with the Finnish avant garde and Ambient scene.

His interest in the contemporary experimental music scene brought him to Berlin, where he resides since 2017. During this period he has collaborated with other local art collectives on sound and visual synthesis: including Lacuna Lab, Noiseberg, and Automaton. Recently, he took part in the project "See you at home", in collaboration with the Goethe Institute in Beijing.

Currently his creative endeavors play across the digital, physical and oral mediums. This way, Filatov attempts to step into audiovisual experiments that involve a close relation to physical spaces.
